ABSTRACT

This directory is a guide to national and regional organizations which focus specifically on women and educational equity for women. It lists and briefly describes organizations and groups providing services, information, or resources on a national level. It also lists general types of organizations that may be found throughout the nation. In addition, certain organizations and resources for each State are presented in a State-by-State list. Strategies for locating the organizations listed are suggested. (Author/EB)

About the Women's Educational Equity Communications Network - WEECN is an information service and communication system established in 1977 and operated by the Far West Laboratory for the U.S. Office of Education under the auspices of the Women's Educational Equity Act. As an information service, WEECN collects, screens, classifies, stores, and provides information on projects and materials related to women's educational equity. As a communication system, WEECN facilitates contact among persons, groups and agencies who are working on behalf of women's educational equity. Users of WEECN include teachers, administrators, counselors, curriculum specialists, preservice and inservice trainers, researchers, students, parents, and citizens.

If you would like to know more about WEECN, please write to us.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

We wish to thank the many organizations who worked with us to review their entries in the directory and to help update or clarify what they do.

We also wish to thank Sheryl Denbo, Office of Planning, Bureau of Occupational and Adult Education, U.S. Office of Education, Washington, D.C. 20202 for a current list of the vocational education sex equity coordinators. The list of Commissions on the Status of Women was supplied by the Women's Bureau, Office of the Secretary, U.S. Department of Labor, 200 Constitution Avenue N.W., Washington, D.C. 20210. We used the National Organization for Women's state coordinators list that was published in the NATIONAL N.O.W. TIMES, August, 1978. Jane Williamson at the Women's Action Alliance provided special assistance by letting us review many of the directories in their library. We also want to thank Marguerite Follett of the Women's Program Staff, U.S. Office of Education, for working with us on this directory.

Special thanks to Gloria Ferguson, Doris Smith, and Jean Sims for contacting state departments of education to determine the names of Title IX Coordinators and to obtain information about recent activities that concern women's educational equity. Valerie Wheat supplied the names of some relevant directories. Jean Marzone helped annotate many of these directories and Katherine Cirksena entered them into this directory. In other words, this directory was compiled with the assistance of the entire WEECN staff.

Index of Organizations 79

INTRODUCTION

The directory is a guide to organizations working for women's educational equity. It lists specific organizations and groups providing services, information, or resources on a national level. It also lists general types of organizations that one may expect to find throughout the nation. Finally, in addition to the above organizations, the directory lists certain organizations and resources for each state in a state-by-state list. The organizations are drawn from the large number that responded to our call to join us in our efforts to build a network connecting those concerned with women's educational equity. We hope that this will be an expanding directory and that more organizations will join with us in the coming year.

The organizations described in the directory do not represent an exhaustive list. We chose organizations for inclusion based on several criteria:

- The organization must have women as a stated, major focus.
- The organization must be concerned with educational equity for women.
- The organization must have a national or regional orientation.

The first criterion means that we do not list organizations or groups unless a major portion of their efforts are devoted to women, and unless this orientation is stated clearly. Therefore, the directory does not describe the Educational Resources Information Center (ERIC) clearinghouses, although many individual efforts toward women's education equity are made by ERIC clearinghouses. However, ERIC is a general information system and does not focus specifically on women. Similarly, the directory does not list organizations or groups that serve women among other clienteles unless service to women is stated as a major purpose.

The second criterion means that we do not include organizations or groups unless they serve an educational function. We choose to define this rather broadly, so that groups are included if they provide or prepare training programs, workshops, conferences, seminars, etc. that enhance women's development. Efforts to educate or inform about women and educational equity, and efforts to implement existing legislation and to advocate other sex equity legislation are also considered to be education.

The third criterion, that the group must have a national or regional orientation, means that we select groups that attempt to serve the nation, as a whole or a large portion of the nation, not just a particular state or city.

We encourage those groups and organizations that meet our criteria for inclusion to send us information so we can add them to the directory as we update it. Send new entries or more current information on entries to:

In Section One of the directory, three major kinds of activities are defined as educational:

- Career or Self Development

- Information

- Implementation

Organizations providing career or self development education are described in the first category. Some programs offer curricula, course materials, syllabi, and other materials useful in traditional elementary, secondary, or post-secondary formats for teachers or students. Others prepare self development materials to help women acquire the personal skills necessary for educational and career advancement. Still others are aimed at helping women develop career orientations that are not necessarily the traditional options open to women. Information organizations are groups devoted to collecting, storing, or disseminating information. We describe groups that have libraries, information networks, referral services, dissemination services, and other collections of information about women and education. Finally, implementation organizations are groups involved in helping the educational system implement legislation and programs that provide for women's educational equity.

While these categories appear discrete and many groups or organizations devote their attention to one of them alone, it is clear that many other organizations do two or all three of these services. We do not attempt to decide which function is the major function of an organization. Instead, we describe many organizations that conduct educational self and career development programs, then those that collect, store, disseminate, or network information, then those that work toward the implementation of sex equity legislation. Thus, some organizations will appear more than once in this directory.

Section Two of the directory is a guide to general types of organizations, groups, and services. In a few cases, the state "branch" of one of these resources appears in Section Three. However, in most cases we only indicate how to locate the resource in your state or area. Information on state or local resources changes quickly, and a full listing of names and addresses would soon be out of date.

Publishers are excluded from the following general categories that comprise Section Two. A few publishers offering special services related to women's educational equity are listed in Section One.

- Commissions on the Status of Women
- National Organization for Women
- Professional Associations
- Sex Desegregation Assistance Centers
- State Departments of Education
- University Programs
- Women's Centers
- Women's Educational Equity Act Projects
- YWCA's

Section Three of the directory lists some resources that are available in each state. Among these are Commissions on the Status of Women, National Organization for Women State Coordinators, Title IX State Coordinators, Vocational Education Sex Equity Coordinators, and directories that list local resources. The criteria for selection of these directories are similar to those for selection of organizations, except that we did not limit the choice to directories serving a national or regional audience. Those with a national or regional focus are listed first. All others are listed by state. While it seems useful to list local directories for connecting with organizations and resources located nearby, it is clear that we have missed some local directories. Again we encourage you to provide us with information on local, regional or national directories that you may know about so that we can include them in future editions of this directory.

SECTION ONE

NATIONAL AND REGIONAL ORGANIZATIONS

Mention of organizations, agencies, or projects in this publication does not imply endorsement by the Far West Laboratory for Educational Research and Development or by the United States Department of Health, Education and Welfare, Office of Education, Women's Program Staff.

The groups identified here represent some of the available resources concerned with women's educational equity. The references are for descriptive information only and do not imply recommendation. The quality of publications and services provided by listed groups has not been evaluated.

SECTION TWO

TYPES OF ORGANIZATIONS

In this section of the directory, we describe types of organizations you can expect to find in your area and suggest strategies for finding them as well as others.

SECTION TWO

COMMISSIONS ON THE STATUS OF WOMEN

Almost every state has one. They are listed in Section Three of this directory by state. Commissions on the Status of Women deal with women's issues and concerns and work to ensure equal opportunity for women in areas like education. Some have resource centers, workshops and educational programs, conferences, employment services, etc.

NATIONAL ORGANIZATION FOR WOMEN (N.O.W.)

Has chapters in most cities. Many chapters have Task Forces on Education. Look up National Organization for Women in your phone book, or contact the N.O.W. National Action Center:

425 13th Street N.W. Suite 1001
Washington, D.C. 20004
202/347-2279

for their list of local chapters. N.O.W. State Coordinators are listed for each state in Section Three.

PROFESSIONAL ASSOCIATIONS

Many professional, academic, and business associations have women's caucuses or committees. These groups provide support, offer educational programs and workshops, grant educational awards, develop career guidance programs, collect and share information, and conduct a variety of other advocacy and implementation activities to improve educational opportunities for women. A list of many of these groups is available from:

Dr. Suzanne Howard
Assistant Director of Education Program
American Association of University Women
2401 Virginia Avenue N.W.
Washington, D.C. 20037
202/785-7750

SEX DESEGREGATION ASSISTANCE CENTERS

Until this year, the Office of Education, DHEW, has had "General Assistance Centers" that helped solve problems related to eliminating discrimination on the basis of race, sex, and national origin. Beginning in late 1978, separate centers are being established to serve each of these groups. The Sex Desegregation Assistance Centers will provide technical assistance, upon request, to local educational agencies in the preparation, adoption, and implementation of plans for desegregation on the basis of sex; in coping with educational problems occasioned by sex desegregation; and in meeting the requirements of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 and of state laws prohibiting sex discrimination. Each center will serve one of the ten DHEW regions. For additional information contact:

Elton W. Ridge, Director
Division of Technical Assistance
U.S. Office of Education
400 Maryland Avenue S.W.
Washington, D.C. 20202
202/245-8484

STATE DEPARTMENTS OF EDUCATION

These provide a wide variety of services to varying clientele with some structural differences from state to state. Basic services available in most states include workshops or inservice training for awareness and compliance, guidelines on interpretation and implementation of regulations, and technical assistance services to local school districts on request. Some departments go beyond these basic services to organize talent banks, create audio-visual materials, re-train teachers to become administrators, attend or create conferences, coordinate with other agencies and professional organizations, monitor compliance with equity programs, etc. In addition to their primary responsibility to the public school districts in their states, some departments provide services to community groups, professional organizations, and businesses as well. Publications and services are generally free of charge, although some states charge a nominal fee to those outside the public school system.

There are special parts of block grants given to state departments by the Federal government that can be used for the express purpose of overcoming sex bias and sex stereotypes in education.

In addition, each state department employs one or more persons specifically to help implement Federal legislation concerning women's educational equity. Sex equity coordinators for vocational education are listed by state in the third section of the directory. as are Title IX Coordinators.

UNIVERSITY PROGRAMS

Many universities or other institutions of higher education have services directed toward women. These usually take three forms: 1) women's centers, 2)women's studies programs, and 3) re-entry or continuing education programs. Women's centers often offer services similar to those offered by community-based women's centers, but also are likely to provide "socialization to university life" services. Women's studies programs offer courses and/or encourage the integration of women and women's studies perspectives into other coursework. Many also conduct research and community outreach programs. Re-entry and continuing education centers at universities often serve women or specifically targeted women. These programs are designed to bring people back into the educational system who have dropped out, and/or to help people with other responsibilities (like children or a job) continue their education in a nontraditional way. Call your local community college, state college, or university to see which of these services is offered.

WOMEN'S CENTERS

Most cities have women's centers offering varied services. These services can range from rooms where a woman can come and relax and read a magazine to office suites with a full range of activities including individual or group counseling, career guidance, self development, consciousness raising, employment placement, workshops, etc. The extent of services offered by a women's center depends on the imagination, energy, and experience of the women involved, and the extent of resources available to them in the community. A strategy for finding women's centers is to look under "Women" or "Woman" or "Feminist" in the white and yellow pages of your local telephone book.

WOMEN'S EDUCATIONAL EQUITY ACT PROJECTS

Since WEEA began funding projects in 1976, a variety of programs and products have been supported. Individual projects are not listed because they change yearly. However, programs and products resulting from WEEA grants are reviewed and made available by a contractor of the Women's Educational Equity Act Program:

WEEA Dissemination Center
Education Development Center
55 Chapel Street
Newton, Massachusetts 02160
800/225-3088 or in Massachusetts 617/969-7100

YWCA's

Most cities have a YWCA. Many YWCA's offer programs and services similar to those of Women's Centers. You can find YWCA's in the phone book.

SECTION THREE

STATE LIST OF ORGANIZATIONS

AND RESOURCES

In Section Three of the directory we list the Commissions on the Status of Women for each state, the National Organization for Women State Coordinators, the State Vocational Education Sex Equity Coordinators, and the State Title IX Coordinators. In addition, directories to resources and organizations are described.

We first describe some national directories, including price and publication information if we have it. Then, for each state, we list the four organizations and the directories we were able to identify for that state. We have not separately listed the general addresses of state departments of education since the vocational education sex equity coordinators and the Title IX coordinators are located there. If you wish to contact other offices in the state departments of education, the same addresses can be used.
